Celebrating Earth Month at Neiman Marcus

Celebrating Steps Towards Sustainability

This month, Neiman Marcus invites you to join us in celebrating the steps that retailers, brands, and individuals can and are taking to be more sustainable and protect our environment. On the following slides, you will learn more about our brand partners that have blazed the trail and made headlines for their sustainable production, business practices, environmental benefits, and eco-conscious charitable partners and contributions.

As part of our spring initiatives, Neiman Marcus Group (NMG) is partnering with APCO Worldwide to build upon our longstanding philanthropic program and conduct the company's first materiality assessment. Results will help us determine the environmental, social, governance (ESG) issues key stakeholders care about most and deliver a long-range strategy with public commitments by the end of FY21.

And, as NMG celebrates Earth Day, we will host an associate event with Elizabeth Cline - New York-based journalist, sustainability expert, and author of "The Conscious Closet" – for a conversation on how to build a sustainable and ethical wardrobe using NMG's sustainable brands and services, like alterations and resale. Ms. Cline's incredible content and advice will be shared with our customers through NMG's social channels.

Lastly, NMG celebrates their second anniversary of their partnership with Fashionphile. With five in-store selling studios and five more in progress to open this summer, we are thrilled to see how this partnership will continue to seamlessly help our customers refresh their closets and reduce their waste by engaging with the circular economy.

About Slvrlake (Women's Only):

- Made in LA, Slvrlake is bringing back craftsmanship to denim.
- The foundation of the collection is built around 'premium vintage' indigo denim which has a unique open weave construction and a 90's supermodel influence.
- They aren't directly sustainable, but the brand's goal is to create quality denim that's built to last – and that you'll want to wear season after season.

About G-Star (Men's Only):

- G-Star's mission is to create the denim classics of tomorrow through continuous innovation in design with respect for people & planet and in a transparent matter.
- Through RAW RESPONSIBILITY, G-Star's platform to continually innovate in sustainable design, the brand is dedicated to a circular approach to how denim is both made and used and are increasing the use of materials, washings and finishes that contribute to a sustainable future without compromising quality, comfort or design.
- 92% of their entire Fall collection is sustainable at the product level, with the exceptions of leather, wool, and acrylic.
- Increased their "cradle-to-cradle" offering to 100% recyclable, no toxic chemicals, zero water waste during make and wash, and made with 100% renewable energy.
- Signed the 2013 Greenpeace Detox Commitment and achieved the goals of banning all hazardous chemicals.

Nanushka

About the brand:

- Nanushka's vision is to build a sustainable future and their mission is to develop holistic products and services that nurture the soul, nature, communities, and fulfill their function. Sustainability is the pillar of their brand and how they envision their present and future, and their means of building a sustainable business are rooted in craftsmanship, experimentation, and progressivism.
- Their approach is to think about the items they make and ask whether each manufacturing process respects people and the planet.
- When it comes to their material choices, they consider the impact of the longevity and durability of their clothes, the way they are cared for, and whether they become waste or part of a new cycle at the end of their use. These choices affect the equilibrium on which their ecosystems are built, which places a great amount of attention the company places on their sourcing and manufacturing practices to make sure they remain in balance.
- Their aim is to offer beautiful clothing made sustainable and to continually increase the ratio of sustainable items in each coming collection.
- Nanushka's current most trendsetting sustainable material is their vegan leather.

Loewe

About the brand:

- Heritage-rich Spanish lifestyle brand combining craft with technology to produce stunning leather goods, clothing, and accessories.
- Sustainable practices from materials to packaging
- At LOEWE, they are combining long-standing knowledge of craft with new research and technologies to help lessen our impact on the planet. Every day, they are exploring new sustainable practices in everything from material sourcing to designing, manufacturing, packaging and the building and management of our sites and stores.
- They use high quality, low impact materials that are sourced and produced with our planet in mind. Factors such as traceability of origin, fair conditions for farmers, animal welfare and the protection of biodiversity closely inform the way we approach and procure raw materials. Leather is sourced from tanneries certified by Leather Working Group (LWG), an international organization that evaluates the environmental compliance and performance of the leather industry.

Guerlain (Abeille Royale)

About the brand:

- Guerlain integrated sustainable development into its company strategy back in 2007 based around four key challenges: biodiversity, sustainable innovation, climate and solidarity. The brand focuses on protecting bees through a partnership with the Ouessant Brittany Black Bee Conservation Association and other beekeeping organizations around the world.
- Guerlain's partnership with The Brittany Black Bee Conservatory guarantees sustainable sourcing of bee products—some of the world's most effective natural healing substances and key ingredients in the Abeille Royale collection.
- Abeille Royale is an anti-aging skincare collection with Pure Royal Concentrate that stimulates the key mechanisms in the healing process within the skin to continuously help to repair wrinkles and loss of tissue firmness.
- The Guerlain-exclusive Royal Jelly is reserved exclusively for queen bees and offers regal nourishment for the skin as well. Inspired from bees and sourced sustainably, this ingredient is rich in exceptional nutrients and a natural source of carbohydrates, proteins, lipids, and vitamins to nurture skin. It is produced in a protected environment and offers exceptional benefits for the skin.

Eileen Fisher

About the brand:

- Eileen Fisher started her brand in 1984 on the simple premise that she was having trouble getting dressed. She kept picturing simple silhouettes in beautiful colors, luxurious fabrics and the right proportions, and from there, her “system” was born.
- The line is designed as a system of simple shapes that work together, year after year. Each year, updates to the classic shapes are released in wearable, mixable and seasonless color palettes.
- Eileen Fisher chooses sustainably and ethically-made fabrics. They trace the cotton in their Organic Cotton Stretch Jersey back to its source, investing in farmers while they’re making the transition to organic and working with industry leaders to track the cotton from field to factory. Since 2008, they have used organic linen that’s grown without harmful pesticides and herbicides—in fields that are healthier for farmers, wildlife and surrounding communities.
- Additionally, they are working to close the loop on their manufacturing—and take their clothes back and make them into entirely new designs through Renew and Waste No More.

Farm Rio

About the brand:

- Farm Rio started from a small stand in a fashion market in Rio de Janeiro in 1997 and has grown into a brand that represents the city's vibrancy and liveliness on a global scale.
- Known for vibrant colors and playful patterns, each collection features more than 400 prints engineered in house, plus a striking array of trims that add character and visual movement.
- Not only is the brand committed to making beautiful clothing, but it is also committed to helping the environment. By partnering with the nonprofit One Tree Planted, an organization that aids in global reforestation, Farm Rio donates a tree to be planted in the Amazon rainforest with every new email subscriber and with each purchase on the Farm Rio website, in stores and at authorized retailers like Neiman Marcus.

Mara Hoffman

About the brand:

- Mara Hoffman aims to design and manufacture garments with great care to reduce their environmental impact and generate awareness.
- They are partnered with a number of organizations that are committed to environmental conservation, developing the circular economy, eliminating plastic packaging, and sourcing sustainable and ethical materials.
- The brand encourages consumers to wear more and wash less – using cold water when washing, dry cleaning only when necessary, and hanging to dry to reduce the impact.
- The brand also encourages shoppers to extend the life of their purchases through tailoring and mending while enjoying the garment and engaging in resale. The brand also has their own take-back system when you can send your old pieces back to them.

Vitamin A

About the brand:

- Vitamin A uses sustainable, high-performance fabrics along with eco-conscious textiles like organic cotton, linen, recycled cotton and Tencel®. All materials are certified to meet the global Oeko-Tex standard for safe textiles.
- The brand holds their manufacturing teams to the highest standards of workplace ethics and environmental responsibility. They work, when possible, with vertically integrated facilities where everything from dyeing to knitting is done in one location, to further reducing their carbon footprint. Additionally, since products are made in California, which has the strictest environmental laws in the nation, they are held to the highest possible standards.
- For some of products that cannot be made in California, they partner globally with fair trade artisans to produce our materials ethically, providing women with fair-wage jobs in safe working conditions.
- Their packaging is 100% recyclable and their distribution facilities are powered with green energy.

Gabriela Hearst

About the brand:

- Gabriela created the first carbon neutral runway show for the Spring/Summer 2020 Collection.
- In April 2019, she achieved her goal of being plastic free for both the front and back of house.
- Born in Uruguay, Gabriela Hearst grew up on her family's 17,000-acre ranch, where she first developed an appreciation for goods made well, intended to last.
- She came to NYC in 2003, and after more than a decade in design, launched her namesake brand in 2015, fusing the values of enduring utilitarianism and practical elegance.
- Practicing sustainable luxury means each garment is flawlessly assembled and made with conscientious materials, including silk, cashmere, linen and wool from her family's ranch. She also uses biodegradable packaging.

LADIES SHOES

Studio Amelia

About the brand:

- Handbags and shoes are designed with a minimalistic but elegant contemporary aesthetic for day or night.
- The brand launched in May 2019 and focuses on two core releases per year.
- From the very beginning, Studio Amelia's founder directly engaged with her customers to gather direct feedback on the design and development process with the overall aim of better understanding what her customer really needed from her product to ensure optimized sales and reduced waste.
- They work with no- or low-minimum factories to produce only what they need, and are exploring vegan leather options.

Ganni

About the brand:

- The Copenhagen-based brand focuses on an effortless carefree spirit with the opposition of feminine and casual styles. GANNI is about making women feel they are capable of anything.
- The brand itself doesn't as a sustainable brand. Instead, they recognize the inherent contradiction between the current fashion industry that thrives off newness and consumption, and the concept of sustainability. So instead, they are focused on becoming the most responsible version of their brand to make better choices every day across the business to minimize their social and environmental impact.
- They have 44 goals for the next three years, announced in their latest sustainability report in April 2020.

Pamela Love

About the brand:

- Pamela Love has sustainability at its core and sees beauty in the fact that the recycled metals and up-cycled stones have had a life long before they reached their hands and will continue to live through their customers.
 - All metals used in her jewelry is recycled, coming only from materials that have previously been refined across many sources including post-consumer products, existing jewelry, gold-bearing products, and scrap and waste metals.
 - All precious stones are ethically sourced and conflict free in compliance with United Nations Resolutions.
 - All stones used in their one-of-a-kind pieces are up-cycled from antique and estate jewelry or from post-consumer sources.
- As an innovative approach to produce fair trade jewelry that empowers marginalized artisans, the brand has partnered with artisan entrepreneurs in Afghanistan through the organization Turquoise Mountain in order to support their growth as artisans and provide them access to the global markets.
- Pamela Love has received numerous awards including the Ecco Domani Fashion Fund in 2011 and CFDA Lexus Eco Challenge for Sustainable Design in 2012. She was a CFDA/Vogue Fashion Fund Finalist in 2010 and a Runner Up 2011. She was also nominated for the CFDA Swarovski Award for Accessory Design in 2011 and 2012 and won the award in 2013.

Greg Lauren

About the brand:

- When Greg Lauren first started using vintage materials, he fell so in love with the beauty of every piece that he wouldn't throw away any of the scraps.
- For the Fall/Winter 2020 season, Greg Lauren began the "GL SCRAPS" Initiative, which allows the scraps of recycled products to be made into new apparel. From the beginning of the brand, more than half of their collections has been produced from repurposed fabrics, and now the scraps from those garments have been turned into new ones.
- The US Army Shelter half or "army tent" has been a cornerstone of Greg Lauren's collection since its inception in 2011. Since then, the brand has used in excess of 8,000 tents. The scraps from the wastage, that would've otherwise been directed to a landfill, were given to local quilters in LA to create yardage that we refer to as Greg Lauren SCRAPWORK. And, one bag of scraps (40lbs) creates 13 yards of SCRAPWORK. Approximately 6 yards (18.48 lbs) of SCRAPWORK was used to make a suit. Any wastage is recollected again for future use.

TSE for Neiman Marcus

About the brand:

- TSE is pivoting towards a movement of high-end sustainable fashion where the objective is to foster change within our production environment in order to move forward towards greater ecological integrity and social responsibility.
- The recycled cashmere we are utilizing is pre-consumer salvaged fibers that are collected from our production process of virgin cashmere. This is a high quality of recycled cashmere, given its free from all forms of microbial impurities, as well as chemicals and pollutants because it is collected in its most natural form. From this we create a blend of 40% renewed, 60% of our finest pure cashmere.
- We believe that it is important to preserve precious resources by reducing waste. Limited resources demand that we rethink the ways in which we live. Aside from creating luxury, our goal is to build a future where we maximize the reuse of materials to its highest potential.
